What's the best investment you can make in a bathroom renovation?

"The best investment is your own personal style. Many homeowners begin a renovation with a strong focus on resale value. Our clients receive the most satisfaction from their bath makeovers when we shift their attention away from what the next homeowner might expect to something they themselves personally love. We challenge standards as we design their ideal personal retreat first, and then we consider the delicate balance between aesthetics and practicality."

When Beth Rafferty's clients told her they wanted their master bathroom to resemble something you'd see at a luxury spa, the Frisco-based designer's first order of business was finishing the room in floor-to-ceiling Carrara marble. "Sometimes when you do a marble bathroom, it can feel really cold and sterile," says Shay Geyer, who designed the space with Rafferty, her mom and IBB Design business partner. "But we lucked out with that lot of Carrara—it has really pretty movement in the veining, which adds depth." Next up for the spalike space were frosted glass doors for the shower and toilet areas, a Lucite side table next to the freestanding tub, shiny chrome sconces, and custom vanities and bejeweled hardware from Elegant Additions. "It's interesting how so many elements of the space are like jewelry, but nothing outshines another piece," Geyer says. "They all stand alone without being overpowering." IBB DESIGN, 214.618.6600, ibbdesign.com; ELEGANT ADDITIONS, 214.745.0088, elegantadditions.net
